TOURISTS CLAIM BAD TREATMENT

Say they were out on Battlefield
Forty Minutes and were Charged a Dollar Each. Statement Given to Park Commission.

Sunday's excursion over the Pennsylvania from Bellefonte and points between that town and Dauphin brought about 905 people, practically all of whom took teams or other forms of conveyance over the battlefield.

Between the time of the arrival of the first and second sections quite a little stir was caused by the announcement that four women from Bellefonte had been given a hurried trip over a portion of the field for which they were charged $1.00 each. J. F. Winegardner was said to be the party who had hauled them, and local people took occasion to express their disapproval of the entire proceeding. During the afternoon the four women signed the following letter which was sent to the National Park Commission this morning:

Gettysburg, Pa., August 18th, 1912
We the undersigned certify that today, Sunday, August 18th, 1912, we were solicited for a trip over the battlefield by a person with an automobile. He said he would show us the entire battlefield and take us all over the field. We arrived at Gettysburg on the excursion from Bellefonte, Pa., at 12.13 p. m. and we were returned to the Western Maryland Station before 1.00 p. m. We were told the party's name is J. F. Winegardner. We saw none of the First Day's Field, West Confederate Avenue, Culp's Hill and other points of interest. We were taken to Round Top by way of the Devil's Den and returned to Gettysburg through the Cemetery. The entire trip which consumed not over forty minutes cost one dollar each.

At various intervals rumors are started about local hackmen giving a bad deal to people who come here on "big days" showing them the Round Tops and the National Cemetery, collecting full fare and then returning for another load. The general sentiment against anything of this sort was thoroughly demonstrated by the manner in which the crowd received word of the visitors' complaint.

Mr. Winegardner was the object of much lively criticism and people were urged not to go with him on trips over the field. Later in the afternoon a representative of The Times interviewed several parties who had been taken out by Mr. Winegardner after the first rumormongers. They stated that they had been given a full two hours' trip taking in all the principal points of interest.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE NUMEROUS

Borough Starts Work at Construction of Large New Concrete Bridge. New Pavements. Painting and Street Oiling.

Gettysburg is going right ahead with its spirit of improvement manifested early in the summer and this week sees many operations going on in various portions of the town.

This morning Street Commissioner Newman and a large force of men started the work of tearing down the old bridge across the Tiber on North Washington street. This will be replaced by a concrete structure of considerably more width and one which will not only be serviceable but a decided ornament to that part of town. The pavement on the west side of the street will be raised several inches and the course of the Tiber in the college meadow will be changed. The whole work when completed is expected to be a notable improvement.

The work of remodeling the old Diller property on Carlisle street, recently purchased by Max Davis, is going along rapidly. The northeast corner of the first floor has been torn out preparatory to the installation of a large plate glass display window and the other changes in the property will be pushed. Mr. Davis will have concrete pavement laid when the work on the inside has progressed sufficiently to permit it.

John N. Weaver is having concrete pavement laid at his property adjoining that of Mr. Davis, making an improvement which will be much enjoyed and appreciated by the people who travel along that particular side walk. Mike Tate is doing the work.

A number of minor improvements are being made in different parts of town. The little school building on the south side of East High street is being repainted. Miss Annie Danner has had the front of her residence on Centre Square repainted. Peter Culp is erecting a brick woodshed to replace his old frame one.

The residents of Springs avenue made another experiment on Friday with a dust-laying preparation. This time they used oil which was sprayed over the roadway with a sprinkler and gives every indication of meeting requirements.

The various building operations are going along at a satisfactory rate and this morning James Reever staked off ground for a new double house on Water street.

WHOLESALE THEFT ON THE MOUNTAIN

Thousand Dollars Worth of Clothing Taken from Club House at Monterey. Many Other Places Visited by Burglars.

Thieves operated at Monterey and Blue Ridge Summit Friday night, breaking into the Monterey country club house where they stole about $1000 worth of clothes from the lockers of the members.

With an iron bar they broke the padlock from the side door, got into the office, which was near the door, stole $15 or $20 worth of cigarettes, about half the stock of the club, and drank an unknown quantity of soft drinks.

From the office they went to the locker room, broke open every one of the fifty lockers and carried off all the men's clothes in it, including flannel trousers and skirts and shoes. Golf sticks and other paraphernalia were not disturbed.

They took their plunder to the rear of the club house and under the trees there, sorted it out, taking away the biggest part and leaving a little behind.

A lamp from a post in front of the club house was used to help the thieves in their operations in the building.

From the club house they went to the Forney drug store on Monterey lane. They broke a front window but could not get in there and went to a side window, where they effected an entrance. They, apparently, found nothing to satisfy them there, for nothing is missing.

The thieves next visited the W. M. Ry., station, broke into the baggage room and pried open two trunks. From these they took the same sort of loot as at the club house—a lot of clothing.

The path of the thieves over Monterey lane was marked, Saturday morning, by beer bottles which had been discarded as the automobile or vehicle made its way from Monterey to the Summit.

One of the state constabulary in Waynesboro was summoned to the scene and the railroad police were put on the case.

There is no clue to the thieves but it is believed they may have been from the city, from the fact that they stole only clothes, which they could dispose of only in the larger places.

DRIVING MATINEE

The Trotter and Pacer Club held its second matinee of the summer on Saturday afternoon. The attendance was fair, the weather nearly perfect but the track was heavy and slow.

The second race was class B, won by George Taylor's bay mare, Omega, which went a pretty race.

Reuben Slentz's mare, Irene, gave an exhibition half mile beside Oyley's running horse which was the feature of the day. She trotted well considering the heavy track. Time 1.09 flat. Summary:

CONGRESS MAY END THIS WEEK

Five Important Bills to Be Acted On.

BUDGET NEAR AGREEMENT

Final Adjournment Depends on Attitude of President and Vetoing Measures.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Important legislation that must act on before congress adjourns stands as follows: The Panama canal bill, before the president.

The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, approved by the house and now before the senate, with provision abolishing the commerce court.

The naval, sundry civil and army appropriation bills, in conference between the two houses.

The general deficiency appropriation bill, before the senate committee on appropriations.

The Indian appropriation bill, conference report pending in the senate.

While adjournment is expected this week, the date is generally conceded to depend upon the president's attitude toward the Panama canal bill and the legislative, executive, judicial appropriation bill. His veto of the latter measure last week was based upon its provisions for the abolishment of the commerce court and the establishment of a seven-year tenure in the civil service, and the house again has risked the veto by passing the measure with the commerce court provision in it. The senate will determine early in the week whether or not it will endorse the measure in this form.

Leaders of both houses are confident that the remaining work on the overdue appropriation bills can be disposed of in three days, with the contingencies of the presidential veto removed. The president has made it clear to members of both houses that he does not favor the free toll provision of the Panama canal bill, but he has not as yet asserted a purpose to veto that measure.

Thus far congress had not succeeded in overriding any of the president's vetoes, and it is not considered likely that either the legislative appropriation bill, or the Panama canal bill can be repassed by a two-thirds vote if vetoed this week. The tariff and appropriation, which the house has repassed over the veto, have failed in the senate, and the single bill which the senate repassed, that affecting claims on the Corbett irrigation tunnel, failed by six votes of repassing in the house.

The sundry civil appropriation bill, in which the appropriation of $225,000 for the tariff board is at issue, is approaching settlement in the conference committee. Out of 259 items in the $116,000,000 bill upon which the two houses agreed, all except about fifty have been settled, and an agreement on those is expected early this week.

The house asked the senate to compromise the naval fight on a one battleship basis, and an agreement on the naval bill is expected immediately. Other measures will not take much time for completion. The senate will take up the six-year presidential term resolution, the uniform bill of lading measure, and the bureau of labor bill this week. All legislation, aside from appropriation bills, is likely to be laid aside, however, in the desire to complete the session by Thursday, or at least by the end of the week.

REMEMBER THE TITANIC

Bolivia's Women Offer Block of Silver for Memorial Arch.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The women of Bolivia, South America, have signified their intention of contributing in a striking manner to the project being carried forward by women of the United States to perpetuate the heroism of the men who perished on the Titanic disaster.

Through the American minister the women of the far away republic have offered from the famed Bolivian mines a block of virgin silver, expressing the hope that it may find a place in the arch which the women's national Titanic memorial committee proposes to erect.

Bees Clog Motor; Man Badly Stung. Dayton, O., Aug. 19.—L. N. Dunn, superintendent of a cartridge company, at Kinks Mills, O., lies unconscious and in a critical condition as a result of attack by a swarm of bees. Dunn attempted to start a motor which had balked and found that a swarm of bees had clogged it. Before workmen could rescue him from the infuriated bees, he was unconscious. Physicians say he cannot recover.

Blast Hits Fliers' Watcher. Altoona, Pa., Aug. 19.—Going to a hill above a stone quarry to watch Lincoln Beachey and Charles Walsh flying, Fred E. Lambert, aged twenty-six, became so interested that he forgot his own danger, and was struck in the back by a stone thrown by a blast, and so seriously injured that he may die.

WATCHES THIEF STEAL JEWELS

Banker's Wife Robbed of Gems Worth $12,000.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 19.—While Mrs. Klem, mute with terror, looked on, a masked burglar robbed the summer home of Walter E. Klem, the Philadelphia banker, at 17 South Providence avenue, in the fashionable Chelsea section of Atlantic City, obtaining jewelry worth more than $12,000.

Awakened by no sound made by the "pussy footed" thief, but rather by a premonition of danger, Mrs. Klem saw the burglar rifling her jewel case. By her side was her husband asleep.

Fearing that if she woke him up or made an outcry, the burglar might murder them both, Mrs. Klem pretended to sleep, but through half-closed eyelids watched the man in the mask make the biggest haul in a series of cottage robberies which have terrorized the resort all summer.

Mrs. Klem had ample opportunity to see the burglar, and as soon as he left the house she awakened her husband, who jumped for the telephone to notify the police.

The burglar had cut the wires. Hastening into his clothes, Mr. Klem ran to a neighbor's house and called up the Atlantic City police. Every available policeman in the city was rushed to the scene, and beat up every nook and corner in the vicinity, but the burglar had made a clean get away.

PENSIONS TO BE PAID

The President Signs Appropriation Bill For $160,000,000.

Washington, Aug. 19.—President Taft's first official act was to sign the $160,000,000 pension appropriation bill.

The pension office was immediately notified, and telegraph orders were sent to the eighteen outlying agencies to start payment at once of the money so long held up by the delay in congress. Every pensioner in the United States will be paid by Tuesday at the latest.

Paymaster General Smith, of the army, authorized payment to enlist men of the regular army for the month of July, leaving the June pay to be paid later on. The officers have already received their pay for June. The pay of the regulars has been held up in the general deficiency bill.

DISTURBED SUFFRAGISTS

Washington, Aug. 19.—After undergoing a severe lambasting at the hands of Representative Ansberry, of Ohio, chairman of the selections committee No. 1, Representative C. C. Bowman, of the Eleventh Pennsylvania district, succeeded in getting the house to postpone consideration of the contest for his seat brought against him by George R. McLean, who was Bowman's Democratic opponent in the congressional election of 1910.

It was the arrangement to take up the Bowman-McLean contest in the house, the majority of elections committee No. 1 having reported that Bowman's title was besmirched by corruption and intimidation, and that his seat should be declared vacant. But the Democratic leaders discovered that Bowman had induced the Republicans to organize a filibuster against the passage of the redrafted legislative appropriation bill in order to prevent action on the contested election case. To avoid the threatened delay in passing the appropriation bill the Democrats had agreed to put the election case over to the December session, provided the contestee himself would ask for postponement.

When the election case was called up Bowman made request for delay, but unfortunately for him, in stating his reasons, he included the alleged illness of Chairman Ansberry, of the committee as one of them. Mr. Ansberry didn't like this, and taking the floor he declared he was ready and anxious to go with the case, no matter how many days it might take to dispose of it. He went on to say that he was willing, however, that the case should be postponed if Bowman was willing to rest for months under the grave charges made against him in the report of the committee and seek re-election to congress under such conditions.

Then Mr. Ansberry proceeded to read from the testimony tending to show that Bowman and his agents had been guilty of intimidating voters and of conniving at the illegal voting of unqualified aliens.

If Bowman was willing to rest under these charges until next December and go through a campaign with them hanging over him, Mr. Ansberry said he would not object to the postponement. Finally it was agreed that the case should go over until next session.

By this arrangement Bowman will remain on the payroll for three or four months longer, which no doubt had a good deal to do with his anxiety for postponement.

HAS MECHANICAL SPANKER

Fined After Quarrel Over How Son Shall Be Punished.

Campaign, Ill., Aug. 17.—Because his wife objected to his using a mechanical device, invented by him at the University of Illinois, for punishing their child, Professor Duff Andrews beat her, and she had him arrested. He pleaded guilty, waiving a jury and paid a fine of $150.

Andrews is associate professor in the engineering experimental station in applied and theoretical mechanics. He applied his theoretical mechanics to the erection of a spanking machine for the chastisement of children with out the usual manual labor. When he tried to demonstrate the practicability of the device on his little son the mother objected.

A quarrel ensued. Neighbors intervened, saving the child from a spanking and allowing the mother to escape.

The device that caused the trouble weighs about twenty pounds, is constructed of aluminum and bamboo, and the "spankers" are padded so as to punish but not injure the patient. "The patient," is bent over a rod and a wheel, operated against cogs connects a crank run by a belt device. The "spanker" makes about thirty-five spans a minute.

OBJECT OF ENVY.

A deep sigh of sorrow broke from the lips of little Freddie.
"I wish," he said, plaintively, "I wish I was Billy Smith."
His mother was astonished—shooked.
"Why, Freddie?" she asked. "Billy Smith has none of the nice things you have. He doesn't get any pocket money, and he isn't as big as you, and he's not nearly so strong. His father never buys him presents or—"
"Yes; I know all about that," said Freddie. "But—"
"And then look what a nice home you have, and nice books, and you never have to go out when it's cold and wet to carry papers, and—"
"Yes, I know that," said Freddie, irritably, annoyed at his mother's strange lack of sympathy and understanding. "But Billy has wiggle his ears, and I can't."—Answers.

"Well, there's nothing unusual about that."

PROBING MYSTERY OF MAN'S DEATH

Report of Accidental Killing Is Doubtful.

Allentown, Pa., Aug. 19.—District Attorney Lawrence H. Rupp has ordered a reopening of the investigation into the death of Sylvester Schleicher, the Slateland slate operator, who was found dead at the bottom of the Shenton quarry.

While the original coroner's investigation, made on the spot, indicated accidental death, so much has developed since to support the neighborhood's theory of foul play that the matter will be thoroughly sifted.

Constable George William is firmly of the belief that Schleicher was slain, and former County Commissioner Henry W. Bloss and President Mack, of the Crescent slate quarry, or which Schleicher was superintendent, incline to the same opinion.

Mr. Mack says he sent Schleicher to Rudolph Ludovinsky's house to engage him as a quarryman. Ludovinsky is said to have borne a grudge against Schleicher, blaming him for his discharge some time ago, when President Mack himself was the man who did it. Schleicher and Ludovinsky made up, and then are said to have quarrelled. A child of Ludovinsky has described this fight to Constable Williams, saying Schleicher was knocked down as he left the house and that the men went outside. Ludovinsky, his brother and another man were arrested after the death, but released on their own recognizance.

Schleicher's fall into the quarry was fearful. From the brink of the quarry he first landed on a sharp ledge of rock 153 feet below, his head being cut off and the body then dropped twenty-eight feet deeper to the bottom. Nearly every bone was broken, and the body was so badly mutilated that it was impossible to differentiate wounds.

KILLED BY BLOW OF FIST

Wilmington Fireman Accused of Murder.

RESULT OF STREET FIGHT

Irvin Waters Charged With Striking Robert Foraker Dead With a Single Blow.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 19.—Charged with the murder of Robert Foraker, whose lifeless body was found on the sidewalk on Maryland avenue, Irvin Waters, a railroad fireman, has been taken into custody. Waters is twenty-five years of age.

Foraker was thirty-five years of age, and resided at 1237 Chestnut street, while Waters resides at 706 South Harrison street.

William Lewandowski was also arrested, and is held as a witness to the murder, the police asserting he saw the attack on Foraker.

The police were puzzled at first to learn the cause of the death, but they were notified that it was the result of a hemorrhage of the brain, due to a blow on the head. This was determined by a post-mortem examination conducted by Coroner Chandler.

Lewandowski gave the police what they believe is valuable information. He declared that he and Foraker had walked together from the home of George W. Kinsler at 1111 Columbia avenue. Kinsler's son was employed by Foraker, who is a contracting electrician. While at the house, the witness asserts, Foraker had declared that his life was in danger, but at the time he gave no reasons for his statement.

While Lewandowski and Foraker were walking home the latter was approached by Waters and the two had some words about Foraker's interfering earlier in the evening when Waters was taking an intoxicated friend home. But few words were exchanged when Waters hit Foraker with his fist and knocked him down. Lewandowski said he picked Waters up and held him for a minute and then laid him on the sidewalk.

Waters was found at his home by the police, and says he does not remember having struck Foraker, but he does remember seeing him fall.

SHOTS STOP MOVIE HOLD-UP

Maryland Deputy, Seeing "Stage" Set for Train Robbery, Routes Actors.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Believing he had suddenly come upon a band of desperate train robbers in the act of holding up an oncoming passenger train on the Chesapeake Beach railroad, E. W. Sansbury, deputy sheriff of Prince George county, Md., put to rout eighteen moving picture actors, who were staging a hold-up at Ritchie station.

He sent a shower of bullets into their midst from a concealed position behind a clump of trees.

Only the quick realization of the actors in the film drama of what was really passing in the mind of the deputy sheriff saved some of them from being shot dead.

Everything was going nicely with the moving picture actors. The ties had been piled on the rails in true western style, the actor-highwaymen were properly masked and were sneaking through the bushes as the onrushing train, chartered for the purpose, hove in sight just west of Ritchie station. The minute the engine saw the pile of ties he was to stop his train and the masked highwaymen were to order everybody to the ground and search their pockets and clothing while the moving picture man took in every movement.

All was set, the highwaymen had sneaked down through the woods, the train was coming with a rush, when "Crack!" went two pistol shots and a couple of bullets whizzed close to the heads of the supposed highwaymen. Crack went the pistol again. The great western train robbery became a scene of confusion wilder than ever graced a real hold-up.

With one accord, passengers, train crew, hold-up men, picture men, fake officers—everybody connected with the play made one wild dash for safety, while the Maryland deputy sheriff emptied both revolvers. Then explanations were in order, and the deputy stayed to watch the picture, which he had so rudely spotted, taken all over.

DARROW FREED; TO BE RETRIED

To Face Second Charge of Jury Bribing.

Los Angeles, Aug. 19.—Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago lawyer, found not guilty on the charge of having bribed a prospective juror in the McNamara case, must stand trial on a second indictment, according to an announcement made by District Attorney Fredericks immediately after the acquittal.

Darrow was apparently unconcerned over the statement of the prosecutor. He was deluged with telegrams from all parts of the country, which began pouring in within an hour after the verdict had been given.

The court room scene which followed the reading of the verdict, just thirty-four minutes after the jury had retired, was one that had no parallel in this city. Jurors embraced the acquitted man, and with tears streaming down their cheeks, declared it was the happiest day of their lives. Court officials, including Judge Hutton and the half dozen bailiffs, joined in the congratulations, and Mrs. Darrow, whom the trial was a continuous nervous strain, stood speechlessly happy, with one hand in her husband's and the other wringing those of the jurors.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the pack-trail into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inciting money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meetings.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sunday with the Daniels. Anna, the captain's daughter, tells him of her plan to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again imports Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she is to marry Nat, her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace's heart is torn, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVII—Keziah and Grace nurse Ellery, who is suffering from brain fever. The doctor and Keziah spread a report that Grace and Ellery are engaged. News comes that Nat has arrived safely in Boston.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In Which a Reception is Called Off.

Far out on the Pacific coast there are two small islands, perhaps a hundred miles distant from one another. The first of these is uninhabited. On the other is a little colony of English-speaking people, half-breed, descendants of native women and the survivors of a crew from a British vessel cast away there in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

On the first of these islands, the smaller one, the Sea Mist had been wrecked. Driven out of her course by a typhoon, she staggered through day after day and night after night of terrific wind and storm until, at last, there was promise of fair weather. Captain Nat, nearly worn out from anxiety, care, and the loss of sleep, had gone to his stateroom and the first mate was in charge. It was three o'clock, the wind still blowing and the darkness pitchy, when the forward lookout shrieked a warning. "Breakers under the lee!" Almost the next instant the ship was on a coral reef, full of water, and the seas breaking over her from stem to stern.

Morning came and showed a little patch of land, with palm trees and tropical vegetation waving in the gusts and green in the sunshine. Captain Nat ordered the boats to be lowered. Much as he hated the thought, he saw that the Sea Mist had made her last voyage and must be abandoned. He went to the cabin, collected papers and charts and prepared to leave. The ship's money, over ten thousand dollars in gold belonging to the owner and to be used in trade and speculation among the East Indies, he took with him. Then the difficult and dangerous passage through the opening in the reef was begun.

Only the captain's boat reached the shore. The mate's was caught by a huge breaker, dashed against the reef and sunk. Captain Nat, his second mate and five of his men were all that was left of the Sea Mist's company. And on that island they remained for nearly two weeks. Provisions they had brought ashore with them. Water they found by digging. Nat hid the gold at night, burying it on the beach below high-water mark.

Then, having made sure of his location by consulting the chart, he determined to attempt a voyage to the second island, where he knew the English colony to be. Provisions were getting short, and to remain longer where they were was to risk starvation and all its horrors. So, in the longboat, which was provided with a sail, they started. Charts and papers and the gold the skipper took with them. None of the crew knew of the existence of the money; it was a secret which the captain kept to himself.

A hundred miles they sailed in the longboat and, at last, the second island was sighted. They landed and found, to their consternation and surprise, that it, too, was uninhabited. The former residents had grown tired of their isolation and, a trading vessel having touched there, had seized the opportunity to depart for Tahiti. Their houses were empty, their cattle, sheep, goats, and fowl roamed wild in the woods, and the fruit was rotting on the trees. In its way the little island was an Eveless Eden, flowing with milk and honey; but to Captain Nat, a conscientious skipper with responsibilities to his owners, it was a prison from which he determined to escape. Then, as if to make escape impossible, a sudden gale came up and the longboat was smashed by the surf.

"I guess that settles it," ruefully observed the second mate, another Cape Codder, from Hyannis. "Callate we'll stay here for a spell now, hey, Cap'n."

"For a spell, yes," replied Nat. "We'll stay here until we get another craft to set sail in, and no longer."

"Another craft? Another one? Where in time you goin' to get her?"

"Build her," said Captain Nat cheerfully. Then, pointing to the row of empty houses and the little deserted cove, he added, "There's timber and nails—yes, and cloth, such as 'tis. If I can't build a boat out of them I'll agree to eat the whole settlement."

He did not have to eat it, for the boat was built. It took them six months to build her, and she was a curious-looking vessel when done, but, as the skipper said, "She may not be a clipper, but she'll sail anywhere, if you give her time enough." He had been the guiding spirit of the whole enterprise, planning it, laying the keel, burning buildings to obtain nails and iron, hewing trees for the largest beams, showing them how to spin ropes from cocoanut fiber, improvising sails from the longboat's canvas, pieced out with blankets and odd bits of cloth from the abandoned houses. Even a strip of carpet from the church floor went into the making of those sails.

At last she was done, but Nat was not satisfied.

"I never commanded a ship where I couldn't hit Yankee colors," he said, "and, by the everlasting! I won't now. We've got to have a flag."

So, from an old pair of blue overalls, a white cotton shirt, and the red hangings on the church pulpit, he made a flag and hoisted it to the truck of his queer command. They provisioned her, gave her a liberal supply of fresh water, and, one morning, she passed through the opening of the lagoon out to the deep blue of the Pacific. And, hidden in her captain's stateroom under the head of his bunk, was the ten thousand dollars gold. For Nat had sworn to himself, by "the everlasting" and other oaths, to deliver that money to his New York owners safe and, necessary expenses deducted of course, untouched.

For seven weeks the crazy nondescript slopped across the ocean. Fair winds helped her and, at last, she entered the harbor of Nukahiva, over twelve hundred miles away. And there—"Hammond's luck," the sailors called it—was a United States man-of-war lying at anchor, the first American vessel to touch at that little French settlement for five years. The boat they built was abandoned and the survivors of the Sea Mist were taken on board the man-of-war and carried to Tahiti.

From Tahiti Captain Nat took passage on a French bark for Honolulu. Here, after a month's wait, he found opportunity to leave for New York on an American ship, the Stars and Stripes. And finally, after being away from home for two years, he walked into the office of his New York owners, deposited their gold on a table, and cheerfully observed, "Well, here I am."

But Trumet did not hear the yarn immediately. All that it heard and all that it knew was contained in Captain Nat's brief telegram. "Arrived today. Will be home Thursday." That was all, but it was enough, for in that dispatch was explosive sufficient to blow to atoms the doctor's plans and Keziah's, the great scheme which was to bring happiness to John Ellery and Grace Van Horne.

Dr. Parker heard it, while on his way to Mrs. Prince's, and, neglecting that old lady for the once, he turned his horse and drove as fast as possible to the shanty on the beach. Fast as he drove, Captain Zebadiah Mayo got there ahead of him. Captain Zeb was hitching his white and ancient steed to the post as the doctor hove in sight.

"By mighty!" the captain exclaimed, with a sigh of relief, "I'm glad enough you've come, doctor. I hated to go in there alone. You've heard, of course."

"Say, ain't it wonderful! I'm tickled all up one side and sorry all down t'other. Nat's a true-blue feller, and I'm glad enough that he ain't sharked bait; but what about the minister and her? She's promised to Nat, you know. Are you goin' to tell Mr. Ellery?"

"Certainly not. And I hope he hasn't been told. He's getting well fast now, but he mustn't be worried, or back he'll go again. We must see Mrs. Coffin. Keziah is our main hold. That woman has got more sense than all the rest of us put together."

But it was Grace, not Keziah, who opened the shanty door in answer to their knock. She was pale and greeted them calmly, but it was evident that her calmness was the result of sheer will power.

"Won't you come in, doctor?" she asked.

He'll Never Marry Her, Now."

asked. "Good afternoon, Captain Mayo."

Dr. Parker entered the building, but Captain Zeb remained outside, stammering that he called he'd better stay where he could keep an eye on his horse. This was such a transparent excuse that it would have been funny at any other time. No one smiled now, however.

"Is—is Mrs. Coffin—er—Keziah aboard?" the captain asked.

"No, she isn't. She went to the parsonage a few hours ago. Mr. Ellis brought the mail and there was a letter in it for her. She said it was important and that she must go home to see about some things. She'll be back pretty soon, I suppose."

Parker found his patient sleeping soundly and had not disturbed him. Returning to the living room he spoke to Grace.

"Humph!" he grunted, watching her from under his brows, "everything seems to be all right in there. He mustn't be told anything that will upset him. He's getting well fast and I want it to continue."

"Yes, I understand."

"Huh! Er—have you heard—Has anyone been here?"

"Yes. I have heard. The telegram came and I answered it."

"You did? Well, it's a miracle and we're all thankful, of course. Did you—er—"

"Doctor, I must go home. I mustn't stay here any longer. You know why not. I must be at home when he comes. You must get some one to take my place. Aunt Keziah will stay, of course, and perhaps Mrs. Higgins would come."

"But stay through tomorrow, at any rate. Nat won't get here until Thursday, and I may be able to find another nurse by that time. And what I shall say to him," motioning toward the other room, "I don't know."

"Must you say anything? Just say that I have been called away for a few days on—on some business. Don't tell him. Don't tell him the truth, doctor, now. He is too weak and I am afraid."

She stopped and turned away. The doctor watched her pityingly. He would have liked to say much more, but he could not, under the circumstances. He stammered a good-by, and, with a question concerning Mrs. Coffin's whereabouts, went out to join Captain Zeb.

"Well?" queried the latter anxiously. "How is it? What's up? What's the next tack?"

"We'll go to the parsonage," was the gloomy answer. "If anybody can see a glimmer in this cussed muddle Keziah Coffin can."

Keziah was on her knees in her room, beside a trunk, the same trunk she had been packing the day of the minister's arrival in Trumet. She was working frantically, sorting garments from a pile, rejecting some and keeping others. She heard voices on the walk below and went down to admit the callers.

"What's the matter, Keziah?" asked Dr. Parker sharply, after a look at her face. "You look as if you'd been through the war. Humph! I suppose you've heard the news?"

Keziah brushed back the hair from her forehead. "Yes," she answered slowly. "I've heard it."

"Well, it's great news, and if it wasn't for—if things weren't as they are, I'd be crowing hallelujahs this minute. Trumet has got a good man safe and sound again, and the Lord knows it needs all of that kind it can get."

"Yes."

"Yes. But there's the other matter. I've been to see Grace. She didn't say so, but it was easy enough to see; the man she promised to marry and thought was dead, is alive. She's a girl of her word—she promised him and she'll marry him. And then what will become of John Ellery? He'll go down hill so fast that a ship's anchor wouldn't hold him. If he doesn't die I'll have to send him away somewhere, and the Regular church will lose the minister we've fought so hard for."

"Yes," concurred Zebadiah, "and them blasted Danieles'll run the shambles and the rest of us'll have to sing small, I tell you."

"So we've come to you, Keziah," went on the doctor. "Do you see any salvation?"

"Yes, I do."

"You do? Where?"

"In Nat Hammond. If he knows Grace doesn't want to marry him, do you suppose he'll hold her to her promise? But—she hesitated—"doctor, you leave this to me. So far as John and Grace are concerned you needn't worry. I'll take it on myself to see that they have each other, as the Almighty meant 'em to. Leave it to me. Just leave it to me. I know I can do it."

Captain Elkanah Daniels and his friend were feeling better and they were busy. Trumet had a new hero now. On Wednesday the Boston papers printed excerpts from Captain Hammond's story, and these brief preliminary accounts aroused the admiration of every citizen. It was proposed to give him a reception. Elkanah was the moving spirit in the preparations. Captain Nat, so they learned by telegraphing, would arrive on the noon train Thursday. His was not to be a prosaic progress by stage all the way from Sandwich. A special carriage, drawn by the Danieles' span and escorted by other vehicles, was to meet the coach at Bayport and bring him to Trumet in triumphant procession. All this was to be a surprise, of course.

Wednesday afternoon the Danieles following was cheered by the tidings that Grace Van Horne had left the beach and was at her old home, the Hammond tavern. And Mrs. Poundberry reported her busy as a bee "gettin' things ready."

Thursday was a perfect day, and the reception committee was on hand and waiting in front of the Bayport post office. The special carriage, the span brushed and curled until their coats glistened in the sunshine, was drawn up beside the platform. The horses had little flags fastened to their bridles, and there were other and larger flags on each side of the dashboard. Captain Daniels, imposing in his Sunday raiment, high-collared cane, stock, silk hat and gold-headed cane, sat stiffly erect on the seat in the rear. The other carriages were alongside, among them Captain Zebadiah Mayo's ancient chaise, the white horse sound asleep between the shafts. Captain Zeb had not been invited to join the escort, but had joined it without an invitation. Kyan Pepper was there also, not yet fully recovered from the surprise which Lavinia's gracious permission had given him.

"Here she comes!" shouted Ezra Simmons, the postmaster. "Right on time, too."

Sure enough! A cloud of dust in the distance, rising on the spring wind, and the rattle of rapidly turning wheels. The reception committee prepared for action. Captain Elkanah descended from the carriage and moved in stately dignity to the front of the post office platform.

The stage, its four horses at a trot, swung up to the platform.

"Hurrah!" shouted the committee. Its uninvited guests and the accompanying crowd of Bayport men and boys which had gathered to assist in the welcome. "Hurrah!"

A passenger or two peered from the coach window. The stage driver ironically touched his cap.

"Thank ye," he said. "Thank ye very much."

Captain Elkanah frowned his disapproval.

"We are cheering Cap'n Nathaniel Hammond of Trumet," he explained haughtily. "We are here to meet him and escort him home. Where is he? Where's Cap'n Hammond?"

"Well, now, I'll tell ye; I don't know where he is."

"You don't? Isn't he with you?"

"No, he ain't. And he didn't come on the train, nuther. He was on it. The conductor told me he saw him and set along with him between stations as far as Cohasset Narrows. But after that he never see him nor hair of him. Oh, that's so! Here's the mail bag, Ezzy."

Captain Zeb stepped beside the stage and put one foot on the wheel.

"Say, That," he whispered, "is that all you know? Where did he go to?"

"Well," the driver's voice dropped lower. "Well," he whispered, "I did hear this much. A chap I know was on the train and he said he see Cap'n Nat get off the cars at the Cohasset Narrows depot and there was a woman with him."

"A woman? A woman? What woman?"

"Blessed if I know! And he didn't nuther. So long! Git dap!"

The reception committee and its escort drove slowly back to Trumet. The Danieles following was disgusted and disappointed.

Trumet spent that evening wondering what had become of Nat Hammond. Captain Zeb Mayo wondered most of all. Yet his wonderment was accompanied by vague suspicions of the truth. And, at eleven o'clock, when the village was in bed, a horse and buggy moved down the Turn-off and stopped before the Hammond gate. A man alighted from the buggy and walked briskly up to the side door. There he knocked and then whistled shrilly.

A window overhead was opened.

"Who is it?" asked a feminine voice.

"Don't be frightened, Grace," replied the man at the door. "It's me—Nat. I've come home again."
